

10.1071/FP21363

Functional Plant Biology

Supplementary Material

Short-term elevated temperature and CO₂ promote photosynthetic induction in the C₃ plant Glycine max, but not in the C₄ plant Amaranthus tricolor

Tianyu Zheng^A, Yuan Yu^A, and Huixing Kang^{A,*}

^ADepartment of Ecology, College of Urban and Environmental Sciences, and Key Laboratory for Earth Surface Processes of the Ministry of Education, Peking University, Beijing 100871, China.

*Correspondence to: Huixing Kang Department of Ecology, College of Urban and Environmental Sciences, and Key Laboratory for Earth Surface Processes of the Ministry of Education, Peking University, Beijing 100871, China Email: kanghuixing@pku.edu.cn

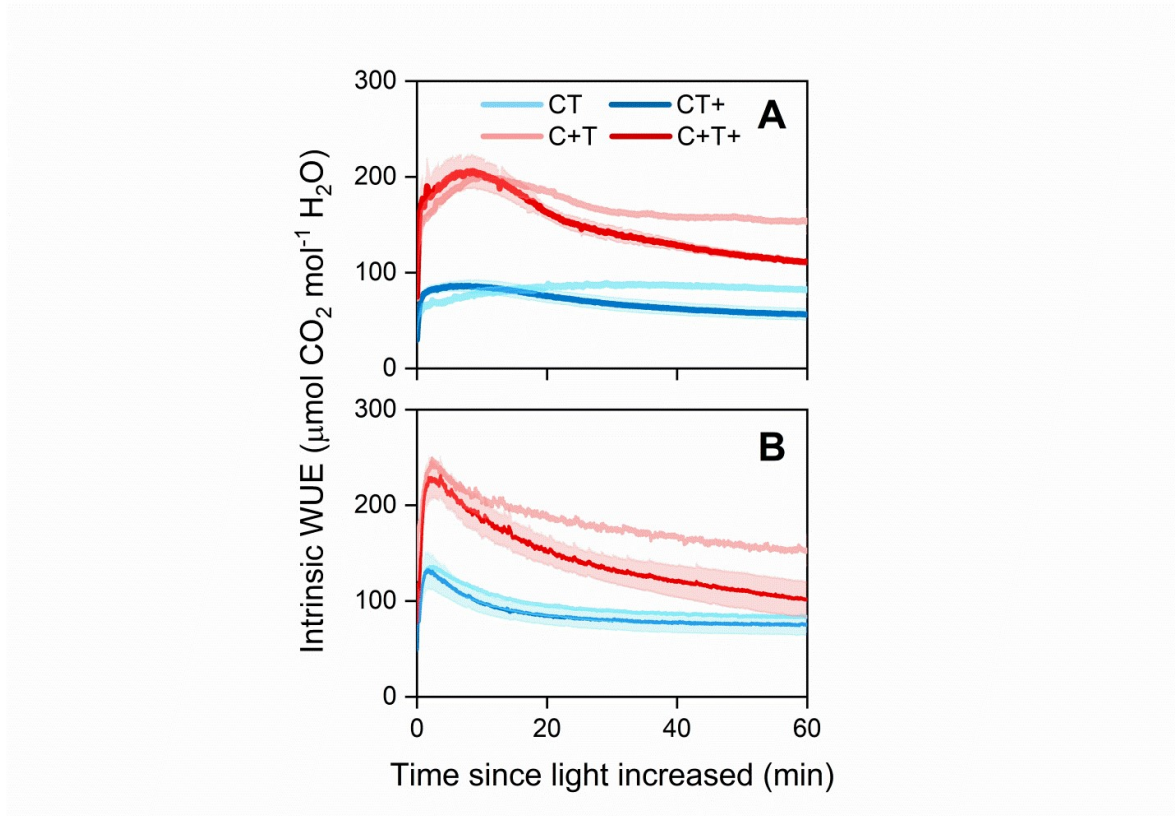

Fig. S1. Intrinsic water-use efficiency (iWUE) in G. max (A) and A. tricolor (B) leaves. Bars and vertical lines indicate the means and standard errors of four biological replicates, i.e., individual plants for each species, respectively.