SEXUAL HEALTH

The following section will ask you about your sexual health and knowledge of STIs

16. When did you last have a test for sexually transmitted infections (STIs)?

- I have never had one
- 0–3 months ago
- 4–6 months ago
- 7–12 months ago
- 1–2 years ago
- More than 2 years ago
- I don't wish to say

17. These questions are to test your knowledge of STIs, sexual health and other related topics. Please select one response for each item.

	TRUE	FALSE	I DON'T KNOW	I DON'T WISH TO SAY
Chlamydia can be diagnosed by a urine test
Using contraception like the pill, IUD, or implant when you are young reduces your future fertility (chance of getting pregnant)

Gonorrhoea, syphilis, and chlamydia can all be easily treated with antibiotics
If left untreated chlamydia infection can last for years
People with STIs almost always have some symptoms
Chlamydia can make women infertile (unable to become pregnant)
A healthy vagina should not have any bacteria in it
A healthy vagina would produce some discharge [i.e. fluids that's not blood]

The following section will ask you about partner notification for STIs.

Partner notification is when a person who has recently been diagnosed with an STI (like chlamydia, gonorrhoea, syphilis and human immunodeficiency virus (HIV)) lets the people they have had oral, vaginal or anal intercourse with (generally in the past 6-12 months) know that they are at risk of having an STI. It is generally recommended that the partner/s seek testing and treatment, and there are lots of different ways to tell them.

The following are hypothetical questions about notifying someone you've had sex with if you had an STI. Consider how you might feel or act in this situation, even if it's not something that has happened to you before.

18. If you had an STI, would you notify your current or past sex partner/s that you have an STI and recommend they get tested?

- a) Yes
- b) No
- c) It depends
- d) I don't wish to say

19. [If selected Yes, No or It depends to Qn 22]
Can you tell us why you selected the above response?

- Free text response

20. If you had an STI, how would you prefer to notify a regular sex partner of your STI result and recommend they get tested? Select all that apply

By 'regular sex partner' we mean boyfriend/girlfriend/in a relationship.

21. If you had an STI, how would you prefer to notify a casual sex partner of your STI result and recommend they get tested? Select all that apply

By 'casual sex partner' we mean any other partners like f**k buddy, one night stand, friends with benefits, just seeing someone.

(Response options for questions 20 and 21)

Answers to STI knowledge questions.

	ANSWER
1. Chlamydia can be diagnosed by a urine test	True - In the past Chlamydia required a vaginal (endocervical) swab in women or a penile (urethral) swab in men to be diagnosed. These days it can be easily diagnosed by a simple urine test, which is a much easier and more comfortable alternative.
2. Using contraception like the pill, IUD, or implant when you are young reduces your future fertility (chance of getting pregnant)	False – Most evidence suggests the pill and other hormonal forms of contraception do not have a long-term impact on fertility.
3. Gonorrhoea, syphilis and chlamydia can all be easily treated with antibiotics	True - If you are diagnosed with one of these infections, it can be easily treated just by taking a few tablets. However, you will still need to be careful when having sex because antibiotics won't protect you from becoming infected again.
4. If left untreated chlamydia infection can last for years	True – Chlamydia is easily treatable with antibiotics, but does not clear up on its own if left untreated.
5. People infected with STIs almost always have some symptoms	False – Some people infected with STIs will have symptoms such as discharge, pain or ulcers. However, often people infected with STIs will have no signs or symptoms and will not be able to tell they have the infection unless they get a test.
6. Chlamydia can make women infertile (unable to become pregnant)	True - Untreated Chlamydia can lead to pelvic inflammatory disease which is a very common cause of infertility in women, making them unable to get pregnant. Chlamydia can also cause infertility in men but this is very rare. Therefore it is very important that you get tested for Chlamydia if there is any risk that you may be infected because there is a simple treatment that can clear the infection.
