

Supplementary Material

The behaviour of an arid zone dasyurid, the kultarr (Antechinomys laniger), in captivity

Hayley J. Stannard^{A,*}, Lisa M. Goodchild^A and Julie M. Old^B

^ASchool of Agricultural, Environmental and Veterinary Sciences, Charles Sturt University, Wagga Wagga, NSW, Australia

^BSchool of Science, Western Sydney University, Hawkesbury Campus, Richmond, NSW, Australia

*Correspondence to: Email: hstannard@csu.edu.au

Supplementary Materials

Fig. S1. Male kultarr (B1) eating a piece of rat.

Fig. S2. Female kultarr (A2) investigating around the food dish and foraging for food.

Fig. S3.Breeding pair (A2 female and A5 male) exploring and foraging around their feeding bowl and displaying no agonism towards each other.