

10.1071/FP23109

Functional Plant Biology

Supplementary Material

Leaf manganese and phenolics as proxies of soil acidification and phosphorus acquisition mechanisms in lentil cultivars on alkaline soil

*Georgia S. Theologidou<sup>A</sup>, Ioannis Ipsilantis<sup>B</sup>, and Ioannis T. Tsialtas<sup>A,*</sup>*

<sup>A</sup>Aristotle University of Thessaloniki, Faculty of Agriculture, Laboratory of Agronomy, Thessaloniki 541 24, Greece.

<sup>B</sup>Aristotle University of Thessaloniki, Faculty of Agriculture, Laboratory of Soil Science, Thessaloniki 541 24, Greece.

*Correspondence to: Ioannis T. Tsialtas Aristotle University of Thessaloniki, Faculty of Agriculture, Laboratory of Agronomy, Thessaloniki 541 24, Greece Email: tsialtas01@windowslive.com

Fig. S1. The experimental layout. The abbreviations for cultivar names were A for ‘Algeria’, F for ‘Flip’, S for ‘Samos’ and Th for ‘Thessaly’. Where UC stands for the unseeded control with (6P) and without (0P) P application.